

If I had the power to change something I would change

If I had the power to change something I would change the education system. In the villages I would give the children chairs and desks so they didn't have to sit under trees and I would supply them with everything else. I would teach languages in school like Spanish and French. I would even send teachers abroad to teach Indian languages in foreign schools.

For EVS I would not make the teachers give lectures but practise it by planting small plants. I would supply proper food in the municipality schools. I would also put up music and sports field-trips. I would also put up programs to thank the guards and peons. I would make the bus compulsory and ban cars. I would even put dustbins in the back garden because sometimes people litter it. I would even make every school allow both boys and girls so more children can get educated.

I would even invite poor children to different schools and let the students teach them. I would have more prayer services to inculcate stronger values. These are the changes I would like to bring about for the betterment of my country.

By Adit Ambani, 6B